PATTON LEADS EMERY IN RACE FOR CONGRESS

Drift of Sentiment Strongly Favors Straight Republican.

PAYS VISIT TO COUNTY

Warmly Greeted By Republicans—Emery's Son Does Some Campaigning Here But Receives Few Assurances of Support.

Charles E. Patton, of Curwensville, who is seeking the Republican nomination for Congress in this district, last week spent several days greeting the voters of Centre County. It was Mr. Patton's hope that he might be able to personally call on every Republican voter in the county. When he concluded his tour of the county on Saturday night it was with the cheering information that everywhere he had been his candidacy had been received with pronounced enthusiasm and that nowhere had he found any evidence of party dissatisfaction or factional troubles. While Mr. Patton was unable to see every Republican voter in person, it was only because he was compelled to cover so much territory in such a short time.

That Mr. Patton's visit created a favorable impression everywhere is the report received from all parts of the county. His dignified bearing, his straightforward manner and his pleasing personality won for him a host of new friends in the Republican ranks.

Unless all indications are wholly wrong, it is quite apparent that the drift of sentiment among Republicans is strongly toward Mr. Patton and that the vote at the primaries for Lewis Emery, Jr., will prove a distinct surprise to the latter's campaign managers. Mr. Emery's son, Delvin Emery, M. J. Moore, Captain J. E. Harder and William T. Hinds spent several days in Bellefonte and other parts of the county. Wherever they called they were treated courteously, but received few, if any, assurances of support. Indicating the close sympathy which the Democratic leaders have for the Emery candidacy was the fact that a majority of those to call on Mr. Emery and his colleagues at the Brockerhoff House were Democrats.

Now that the campaign for the primaries is drawing to a close, it is admitted by many Democrats that their sole desire to see Emery nominated was based on the idea that he could not be elected and that the next Congressman from this district would, therefore, be a Democrat. With the tide running so strongly in favor of Patton, the Democratic managers do not conceal the fact that their interest in the Emery movement was actuated by the suggestion that it afforded a chance to create trouble in the Republican ranks.

That every Republican who voted for Governor Stuart in preference to Emery four years ago will on June 4 vote for Patton in preference to the same Emery is a foregone conclusion. Furthermore, it is reasonably certain that fully fifty percent of those Republicans who voted for Emery four years ago will not vote for him at the approaching primaries. This is a statement, based not merely on individual opinion, but upon the honest judgment of a large number of Republicans who have made it a point to canvass their districts and guage public sentiment. On this basis, and with every Republican in the county remaining on guard until the vote is polled and counted, the nomination of Mr. Patton over Mr. Emery is assured.

This man Patton, as he is already familiarly called by Centre County Republicans, comes from a family of winners. It is a family with a proud record. Mr. Patton's great-grandfather was General John Patton, who came from Ireland to Philadelphia in 1765, and who was Colonel of the Sixteenth Continental Regiment of Pennsylvania during the Revolutionary war. General Patton, during that struggle, contributed from his private purse, $10,000 towards the support of the Colonial forces. In 1789 General Patton moved to Centre County, and in 1791, he with Colonel Miles, founder of Milesburg, built the old Centre furnace. At the time of his death, in 1804, Mr. Patton was Major General of the Division of the Pennsylvania Militia. Captain John Patton, the grandfather of Charles E. Patton, was an officer in the navy. About the year 1810 he came to Centre County and located at Tussey furnace, being married a year later to Miss Susan Antes, of Boggs township. He later removed to Tioga county, where General John Patton, father of Charles

"FROM CAUSES UNKNOWN"

Coroner's Jury Unable to Say How Harry Yearick Met Death.

The mystery surrounding the recent death of Harry Yearick, at the home of his brother, John Yearick, at Hecla, remains unsolved. His widow was last week released from the Clinton county jail, following the report of Dr. Pond, of State College, that a chemical analysis of Yearick's stomach had failed to reveal the presence of arsenic. Coroner Huff, on Tuesday, last, conducted an inquest at Bellefonte, witnesses were examined and at the conclusion the jury was unable to determine just what caused Yearick's death. The jury accordingly rendered a verdict that Yearick had come to his death "from causes unknown."

John Yearick and his brother's widow were the principal witnesses. The first named related how Yearick had been brought to his home from Salona, and the manner of his death. Mrs. Yearick denied that she had cooked the meal which her husband had eaten and which caused him to became violently ill. It was the judgment of District Attorney Hall, of Lock Haven, that the case was surrounded by suspicious circumstances and that this suspicion pointed strongly toward certain persons. He doubted, however, that the evidence, as thus far gathered, would be sufficient to convict in the courts.

The jury called by Coroner Huff, and which was unable to determine what had killed Yearick, was composed of the following: S. H. Shaffer, H. D. Vonada and William Clevenstine, of Zion, and Howard Smead and P. H. McGarvey, of Bellefonte.

STUNNED BY LIGHTNING

Mrs. Benjamin Bequeath Rendered Unconscious on Tuesday.

While in the yard of her home, in Bush Addition, feeding the chickens, on Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Benjamin Bequeath was rendered unconscious by a bolt of lightning, which struck the ground a short distance from where she happened to be standing. Fortunately, she escaped with no serious injury.

The lightning played all sorts of antics before striking the ground nearby where Mrs. Bequeath was standing. It first struck a large stone thirty or forty feet away, then jumped to the ground, only to travel along the surface for some distance and finally entered the earth a few inches from a chicken coop. Where the lightning entered the ground it tore up a hold probably five inches in diameter. The earth surrounding the hold assumed a lead color. During the same heavy storm, many telephones were put out of commission by lightning.

Grange Meeting Postponed.

The meeting of Centre County Pomona Grange is postponed until Friday, June 3, on account of the funeral of Past Master George Dale, which takes place Thursday, May 26.

"DIED" TEN YEARS AGO; IS NOW REALLY DEAD

Austin Swisher, of Julian, Succumbs After Brief Illness.

HAD ODD EXPERIENCE

Once Before it Was Thought He Was Dead---Body Laid Out and Undertaker Summoned Then Regained Consciousness.

Austin Swisher, a well known resident of Juliah, died at 2 o'clock, on Sunday afternoon, last, and was buried at that place at 10 o'clock on Tuesday. It was not until Mr. Swisher's body had been lowered into the ground that some of the more superstitious and skeptical were quite sure that he was really dead and that he would not surprise everybody by coming back to life, as he did once before about ten years ago.

Mr. Swisher, at the time of his death, was 76 years old. About ten years ago he become ill and after a few days supposedly died. Nobody questioned the fact that he was dead. An undertaker was notified and a casket was ordered. The undertaker was on his way to the Swisher home, prepared to embalm Mr. Swisher's body, when he was stopped with the explanation that the dead had come to life.

It was true. The entire neighborhood was aroused by the strange case. Mr. Swisher had been laid out and remained supposedly dead for a number of hours. During that time there was no indication of life, the muscles of the body remaining rigid and the face showing a death-like pallor.

The word of Mr. Swisher's death had been sent out to friends and it was while many of them were calling to extend sympathy to the family that the supposed corpse relaxed, the eye lids quivered, the lips moved and to the amazement of all, Mr. Swisher spoke. Had he remained in a comatose condition one hour longer the undertaker would have arrived and the process of embalming would have been under way.

With this all recalled by the announcement on Sunday that Mr Swisher had died there were not a few who watched with deep interest to see if he would again return to life. This feeling of doubt that he was in reality dead was strengthened by the knowledge that as late on Saturday he had been seen on the streets at Julian, apparently in good health and displaying unusual vigor for a man of his years. On Sunday, however, he suffered a sinking spell and about 2 o'clock that afternoon he passed away.

Surviving Mr. Swisher are his widow and the following children: James, Carrie, Mary, Ned, Margaret and Chapman.

To Make Soil Analysis.

Professor Charles P. Shaw, of State College, has been engaged by the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg Railroad to make a detailed soil analysis of properties along its line. Next week Professor Shaw, accompanied by some of the officers of the company, will make a tour of the undeveloped farm property in Pennsylvania and New York. For quite a while there has been a theory indorsed by some that soil undermined by coal operations was reduced in productive value. Other soil experts have held that where the coal veins have been at a depth of 75 feet or more the surface ground for farming purposes has been enhanced in value, rather than the reverse.

Accident at Funeral.

While Mrs. Charles Yearick, of Howard, and Mrs. Elmer Ross and daughter, Edith, of Lemont, were returning from Jacksonville, after attending the funeral of John Holmes, on Thursday, last, their horse took fright and plunged over an embankment. The buggy was badly wrecked and Mrs. Yearick had both arms broken. Mrs. Ross was badly bruised, but no bones were broken. Miss Ross escaped uninjured.

OLD "VETS" TO DECORATE WAR GOVERNOR'S GRAVE

Pennsylvania Reserves, in Phila., Again Send Wreath.

OWEN JONES' LETTER

Man Who Suggested Beautiful Plan for Honoring Curtin's Memory, Writes to "The Republican"—G. A. R. at M. E Church Sunday Morning.

In keeping with their honored custom of a number of years, the Pennsylvania Reserves of Philadelphia have this week shipped to Bellefonte a beautiful wreath to be placed upon the grave of the late Governor Andrew Gregg Curtin. The wreath will be taken to the cemetery by Gregg Post, No. 95, G. A. R. Appropriate memorial services will be held by the Post. On Sunday morning the Post will march to the Methodist Episcopal church, where Rev. Dr. Thomas S. Wilcox will deliver the memorial address.

A letter received by us a day or two ago from Owen Jones, of Philadelphia, a warm admirer of Governor Curtin, tells an interesting story in regard to the wreath shipped here this week. No man in the State had a higher regard for Curtin than Owen Jones. It was largely at the suggestion of Mr. Jones that the custom was adopted of sending a wreath each year from Philadelphia with which to decorate th Curtin grave. Mr. Jones' letter will strike a responsive chord in the heart of every man who wore the blue. His letter follows:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN,

Dear Sir: On Memorial Day next will be the fifteenth year [illegible] Association for the Pennsylvania Reserves, of Philadelphia, will forward a des[illegible] to the family of our late Andrew G. Curtin, who was beloved and respected by every old soldier who left his home and fireside from 1861 to 1865 to preserve this great government of ours. At the call of Abraham Lincoln for soldiers there was [illegible] in this country who played his part more earnestly and patriotically than did Andrew G. Curtin. The old war Governor of Pennsylvania was the first to respond. Pennsylvania played her part well, and all credit is due to the promptness and foresight of our beloved Governor. God bless him!

Fifteen years ago at Mount Moriah Cemetery, while dedicating the grave of General William McCandless, better known as "Buck" McCandless, and Captain John Taylor, which has been kept up, ever since, we thought it would be a proper thing to advocate the design which has been sent to Bellefonte in honor of our beloved Governor. I have been Chairman of the Committee ever since, and take great delight in honoring his memory with the other members of our Association.

In 1868 our Association held a re-union at Lancaster. Governor Curtin spoke at the grave of General Reynolds. He said in his address, he hoped when he died there would be one of the old Reserves left to place a red rose on his grave. When he was through with his address I said to him: "If I am living, I will place a red rose on your grave," and I did. It was the happiest day of my life, to think that I was spared to carry out my promise. I was at the funeral. I was at Bellefonte on the Centennial year of your County, the day the Corner Stone was laid for the Soldier's Monument and the Curtin Memorial, and I was at Bellefonte the day the Monument was unveiled. I was a small contributor to the cause, and received a beautiful certificate, which I cherish very kindly.

I was commander of our Post in 1900, Pennsylvania Reserve, Post 191, G. A. R. I recommended that year that we decorate the pews of Washington and Betsy Ross in Old Christ Church, Second and Market Streets, Philadelphia, which we have done every year since, and will continue to do honor to the memory of our beloved governor, the Father of his

He was brought to the Pennsylvania station, here, where the ambulance was in readiness to give him a quick dash to the hospital.

GEORGE DALE DEAD; WAS NOTED FARMER

Passes Away at Home at Dale Summit on Sunday Morning.

AN ACTIVE GRANGER

Instrumental in Organizing Lutheran Congregation at Shiloh and Building Church on His Farm—Sunday School Supt. for Thirty Years.

George Dale, one of the most prominent and best known men of Centre County, died at 3 o'clock on Sunday morning, May 22, at his home near Dale Summit, in College township. He had been ill for about six months with a complication of diseases. Although it was the judgment of his friends that he could not recover yet his death was rather unexpected.

Deceased was a son of Christian Dale, one of the pioneer residents of Centre County, and was born at Oak Hall, August 1, 1831, making his age 78 years, 9 months and 21 days. December 26, 1855, he was married to Miss Helen Musser, of Penn Hall. Soon thereafter he moved to the farm, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was an industrious and frugal farmer and his advice and counsel were sought on this and all other kindred subjects by the entire neighborhood.

Mr. Dale was a member of the Grange organization and for many years held the position as Master of the County Grange. He took a deep interest in all phases of the Grange work. He was a devoted member of the Lutheran Church and was instrumental in organizing the Lutheran congregation, at Shiloh, and building the Lutheran Church, which stands on his farm. For almost thirty years he was superintendent of the Sunday school and was always found in his place attending to the duties of that office. In the community where he spent his entire life he had the respect and confidence of his neighbors and friends and as a husband and father there could be none better. Two years ago his wife preceded him to the grave. He is survived by the following children: Horace C. Dale, of Rushville, Nebraska; Mrs. Frank Musser, of near Bellefonte; John and Willard, of Shiloh, and Lilly, at home. He is also survived by the following brothers and sister: Mrs. Susan Musser, of Hillsmore; William J. Dale and Mrs. Catharine Musser, of Pine Grove Mills; Philip S. and A. W. Dale, of Oak Hall, and A. A. Dale and Clement Dale, of Bellefonte.

COLONEL YORK WOODWARD.

Colonel York Woodward, at one time a well known resident of Williamsport, died on Friday, last, at New Orleans, Louisiana, after an extended illness. Colonel Woodward was born in Williamsport, 1842, and was the second of a family of seven children. With his brother, Oliver, he enlisted in the old Fifth Pennsylvania Reserves as a drummer boy, from which position he advanced to the proud post of colonel. During the war he was twice captured and seven times wounded. After the war Colonel Woodward was in charge of a detachment in charge of the old Ford theatre, at Washington, D. C., and was there at the time President Lincoln was assassinated. Later Colonel Woodward was given a government position at New Orleans, at which city he resided to the time of his death. Surviving are the following brothers and sisters: Colonel John A. Woodward, of Howard; Joseph W. Woodward, of Spokane, Washington; Anna H. and Mary F. Woodward, of Williamsport, and Martha D. Woodward, of Shady, N. Y.

MRS. A. J. GRIEST.

An estimable woman passed away when death, on Thursday afternoon last, ended the long and useful life of Mrs. A. J. Griest, at her late home, at Unionville. She had been ill for several months, death finally resulting from a complication of diseases. Mrs. Griest's maiden name was Mariah Catherman and during all her married life she resided at Unionville. A devout Christian woman, a kind and loving friend and generous neighbor, she was surrounded by a circle of warm admirers by whom her death is greatly mourned. Deceased was aged about 70 years and was the widow of the late A. J. Griest, who died several years ago. Surviving are the following children: Gertrude and Mary, of Unionville; Harry, Mt. Union; Edward, of Philipsburg; and Charles, of Barnesboro. Funeral services were held on Monday, being conducted by Rev. James A. Pratt. Interment was made in the upper cemetery, at Unionville.

MAXIMS OF MARK TWAIN

They Are Full of Homely Wit and of Deep Wisdom.

Mark Twain selected this one to adorn the page following the title of one of his books:

"These wisdoms are for the luring of youth toward high moral altitudes. The author did not gather them from practice, but from observation. To be good is to be noble; but to show others how to be good is nobler and no trouble." Some of the other maxims read:

"Noise proves nothing. Often a hen who has merely laid an egg cackles as if she had laid an asteroid."

Training is everything. The peach was once a bitter almond; cauliflower is nothing but a cabbage with a college education."

"The autocrat of Russia possesses more power than any other man in the earth but he can not stop a sneeze."

"Habit is habit, and not to be flung out of the window by any man, but coaxed downstairs a step at a time."

"One of the most striking differences between a cat and a lie is that a cat has only nine lives."

"When I reflect upon the number of disagreeable people who I know have gone to a better world, I am moved to lead a different life."

"The true Southern watermelon is a boon apart, and not to be mentioned with commoner things. It is chief of this world's luxuries, king by the grace of God over all the fruits of the earth. When one has tested it he knows what the angels eat. It was not a Southern watermelon that Eve took; we know it because she repented."

"Be good and you will be lonesome."

"Few things are harder to put up with than the annoyance of a good example."

"It were not best that we should all think alike; it is difference of opinion that makes horse races."

"Even the clearest and most perfect circumstantial evidence is likely to be at fault after all, and, therefore ought to be received with great caution. Take the case of any pencil sharpened by any woman; if you have witnesses, you will find she did it with a knife; but if you take simply the aspect of the pencil you will say she did it with her teeth."

"April 1. This is the day upon which we are reminded of what we are on the other 364."

"The English are mentioned in the Bible; blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."

"Adam and Eve had many adventures, but the principal one was that they escaped teething."

"There is this trouble about special providences---namely, there is so often a doubt as to which party was intended to be the beneficiary. In the case of the children, the bears and the prophet, the bears got more real satisfaction out of the episode than the prophet did, because they got the children."

"There is no character, howsoever good and fine, but it can be destroyed by ridicule, howsoever poor and witless. Observe the ass for instance; his character is about perfect; he is the choicest spirit among all the humbler animals, yet see what ridicule has brought him to. Instead of feeling complimented when we are called an ass, we are left in doubt."

"Consider well the proportions of things. It is better to be a young June bug than an old bird of paradise."

"Why is it that we rejoice at a birth and grieve at a funeral?" It is because we are not the person involved."

"All say, 'How hard it is that we have to die'---a strange complaint to come from the mouths of people who have to live."

"It is easy to find fault, if one has that disposition. There was once a man who, not being able to find any other fault with his coal, complained that there were too many prehistoric toads in it."

"When angry count four; when very angry, swear."

"The holy passion of friendship is of so sweet and steady and loyal and enduring a nature that it will last through a lifetime, if not asked to lend money."

"Classic." A book which people praise and don't read."

"The man with a new idea is a crank until the idea succeeds."

Wail of the Married Man.

A Kansas City preacher is experimenting with a separate prayer meeting for men and women, and the experiment will be watched with interest. He argues that the men are afraid to come out and ask the Lord for what they want, their wives being present to hear; that they will be more free if only men are present. "There is something in that," writes a mean man to the Globe. "I want the Lord to change my wife's disposition. She nags and is extravagant, and is always made. If I were to take such a prayer to the throne of of heavenly grace, with her kneeling beside me to hear, there would be a row when I got home that would shake all the mottoes off the walls. I would also like to ask for a lot of things I want no women to hear about. I have noticed that if a man at prayer meeting sidesteps in his prayer and asks for anything material, the women talk about his worldly ambition next day. I have a notion that a lot of us men want things we don't want the women to know about."—Atchison Globe.

HOW ALASKA BECAME OURS

Proceedings that Added Big Section to the Country's Territory.

While angry debates of reconstruction were engaging the politicians "on the hill" in Washington in 1867, the Department of State was quietly negotiating a treaty, the importance of which is just beginning to dawn upon the American people. Secretary Seward thought he saw real military and commercial advantage in the acquisition of Alaska. The heroic Cassius Clay, then United States minister to Russia, was sure of it. Russia was eager to turn over to the United States her American possessions, that our Pacific defenses might be carried northward and married to her own Asiatic fortifications at the point where the waters of the Arctic and the Occidental seas caress. This was the czar's dream. To Secretary Seward came an Arctic vision of great commercial reward in the development of vast seal and fish industries. People who had been there had reported to him that the country in all particulars was much like Norway and Sweden. Scandinavia had great cities, cultured capitals, valuable commerce, a proud and industrious people and happy homes. Would the great country through which flows the mighty Yukon some day parallel this? It might take centuries, perhaps; but the great unseen things have ever been the world's most benignant boon. Concluding some friends diplomatic dickering, Secretary Seward offered to the St. Petersburg government $7,200,000 for their "Russian-America." Even against the whole world's unbelief, at this price it was a bargain.—From Collier's.

"My child was burned terribly abou the face, neck and chest. I applied Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil. The pain ceased and the child sank into a restful sleep."—Mrs. Nancy M. Hanson, Hamburg, N. Y.

Fame and Fat Men go Together.

The augury for fame is certainly in favor of Mr. Taft. Here comes Claude Berton, the French publicist, with the argument that brilliant geniuses are usually the possessor of brilliant appetites. Balzac was a big eater, so was Hugo, so was Flaubert, so was Zola. In England there has been a motley array in modern times---Fielding, Thackeray, Dickens, Macaulay, for example. In Germany, Bismarck, Goethe, Lessing. In America, Franklin, Irving, the late Mr. Cleveland, and---perhaps---the Republicans' nominee.

If there be any doubt remaining as to Balzac's capacity for Gargantuan voraciousness Berton disposes of it when he informs us of some of the great psychologist's sessions at the Cafe Very in Paris. Here was the menu, entirely accounted for by Balzac. Horse d'oeuvre, eight dozen of oysters, twelve cutlets, a duckling, a pair of partridges, a sole and the usual balance of etcateras. Yet Balzac's capacity for toil was only equaled by Napoleon's, and his daily dinner was hardly ever smaller than the one mentioned. Napoleon ate but sparingly.

Berton mentions that Zola's literary method varied in the ratio of his appetite. In his heavy-eating period he produced some of the grossest material that has yet polluted literary endeavor--- "L'Assommoir" for example and "La Terre." On the advice of his doctor, he decided in late life to cut down his provender. The result was "Lourdes."

As to the particular dietary intellectual men should follow. Berton declares in effect that it should follow the particular kind of literary attempt made. According to this argument, one might imagine a poet living on sole, a journalist might live on printer's "pi" or "flong" a singer on nightingales' tongues, and Mr. Edison would keep his constitution going on a diet of electric fish. This is not, however, the point made by Berton, who suggests that a light diet is good for the man who writes light literature, and that when it is a question of deep study of human nature or of a philosophical treatise, or of a historical work, the brain looks for plenty of blood drawn from the heavy meats.---New York World.

PEANUTS AS ARTICLES OF FOOD

Declared to be Palatable and Healthful Substitute for Meat.

We are now told that, so far as food qualities are concerned, peanuts are well adapted to take the place of meat. There has been a marked increase in their consumption, and the call for nuts in the shell has been exceeded by the demand for peanut butter, the modern methods of manufacture having popularized this product. The peanut has entered a new field, and will no longer find its chief glory at the circus or on the baseball grounds. In the form of butter it is palatable and wholesome.

Several of the southern states grow peanuts. In some of them the industry is of large proportions. Our annual crop is about 12,000,000 bushels, worth $7,000,000, but our production is now far below the demand. The cultivation of peanuts has proved a profitable industry for Japan, from which country we imported over 5,500,000 pounds in the first ten months of last year. In 1907 we imported over 5,500,000 pounds in the port of Japan, and in 1908 we took 81 per cent. The lower grades of the peanut are retained at home by the Japanese for the manufacture of peanut oil and peanut cake.

With the larger consumption and growing demand here, it would seem that a greater acreage for the crop in this county would yield a good profit. In 1907 Japan had 14,825 acres under cultivation, which produced 1,302,957 bushels.—Christain Science Monitor.

HAPPY WOMEN

Plenty of Them in Bellefonte, and Good Reason for It.

Wouldn't any woman be happy.
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,
She finds relief and cure?
No reason why any Bellefonte reader
Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. B. F. Deitrich, 391 E. Bishop St., Bellefonte, Pa., says:" I know that Doan's Kidney Pills are a good kidney medicine and I do not hesitate one mement in confirming the public statement I gave in their praise in Oct. 1907. A member of my family complained a great deal of backache and headaches and I had heard so much about Doan's Kidneys Pills that I procured a supply at Green's Pharmacy Co. Their use effected a complete cure and also strengthened the kidneys. The benefit received has been lasting and I have thus been convinced that Doan's Kidney Pills act just as represented."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agent for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The Only Way to Sleep.

One chilly evening up at Lake Hopatcong, in the New Jersey highlands, a number of people were loi ing about in the hotel sitting room before a big, blazing log fire. Edwin Markham, author of "The Man with the Hoe," was there, talking poetry with some literary-minded newcomers.

"Well, it's about bedtime," said one pale city man. "And a mighty cold night, too. This is the kind of night when I pity those who have to sleep outside."

"Pity me, then," said Markham.

"Why so?" said the man, curiously, "You don't have to sleep out, do you, Mr. Markham?"

"No; I don't have to," was the poet's quiet reply. "But I do." Then he explained that during his annual six months' stay up at the lake he always slept out on the open veranda of his cottage, no matter what the weather.

"Quite a good many do that nowadays, you know," said Markham. "It seems that people are just beginning to discover that they have lungs and that their lungs have to be fed, as well as their stomachs."

ECCENTRIC BRIGNOLI.

Some of the Peculiarities of the Once Famous Tenor.

Brignoli, the great tenor, was so careful of his voice when he had to sing that he would not speak at all and was in the habit of writing his wishes on a piece of paper. During the last years of his life he lived at the Everett House, New York, when not on the road. It took him at least three-quarters of an hour to go from his room to the sidewalk. He must get used to the changes very gradually. Leaving the room, he would pace up and down the hall for ten or fifteen minutes until thoroughly "acclimatized," as he himself would say, and from there would go to the lobby to experience for twenty minutes a slightly lower degree of temperature.

At the end of half an hour he usually reached the vestibule, where he would pass another quarter, opening the outer door occasionally to get a taste of the fresh air. When thoroughly acclimatized here he buttoned his greatcoat close about him and stepped out on the pavement.

Brignoli never was known to be ready to go on the stage to sing his part. He had to wait one minute or several minutes before appearing. In this he was a great trouble to managers. "Just give me one minute more," he would beg, and when that was up he would plead for another and another till all patience was exhausted.

THE GREEN FIEND.

Absinth Was Originally a Harmless Medical Remedy.

Absinth, the green fiend that saturates fashionable France, was originally an extremely harmless medical remedy.

It was a French physician who first used it. His name was Ordinaire, and he was living as a refugee at Couvet, in Switzerland, at the close of the eighteenth century. Like many other country doctors at that time, he was also a druggist, and his favorite remedy was a certain elixir of absinth of which he alone had the secret.

At his death he bequeathed the formula to his housekeeper, Mlle. Grandpierre, and she sold it to the daughters of Lieutenant Henriod. They cultivated in their little garden the herbs necessary for concocting it, and after they had distilled a certain quantity of the liquid they sold it on commission to itinerant peddlers, who quickly disposed of it in the adjacent towns and villages.

Finally, during the first decade of the nineteenth century, a wealthy distiller purchased the formula, and very soon afterward he placed on the market the modern absinth, which differs greatly from the old medical remedy, since the latter contained no alcohol and very little absinth.

A Painter's Troubles.

The desire of the Bank of England officials to discover forgers has sometimes led to curious mistakes. On one occasion the painter, George Morland, in his eagerness to avoid his duns, retired to an obscure hiding place in Hackney, where his anxious looks and secluded manner of life induced some of his neighbors to believe him a forger of notes then in existence. The directors, on being informed, dispatched some dexterous detectives to the residence, but Morland's suspicions were aroused by their movements in front of the house and, thinking them bailiffs, escaped from the back to London. Mrs. Morland informed the visitors of her husband's name and showed them some unfinished pictures. The facts were reported to the directors, who presented Morland with two twenty-pound notes by way of compensation for the alarm.

She Didn't Dance.

In 1736 a gentleman living in Hampshire, England, named Samuel Baldwin, died after a rather stormy and most unhappy married life. In his will he directed that all his vast estate be given his wife on condition that she should dance upon his grave from time to time. As the will further instructed that his remains should be taken by boat to the Needles and from there cast into the sea, this, of course, prevented his widow from fulfilling the conditions of the will and thus lost her the property. He, however, had his revenge for the various tempers she had exhibited during their life together and for the remarks she often made that she "would yet dance upon his grave."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

His Job.

Joe—I have got a good job at last, Ben, me boy.

Ben—What be doin'?

Joe—Oh, I'm a cashier in a p'lice orfis, and a rattlin' good job it is.

Ben—A cashier in a p'lice orfis, Joe. What's that? I never 'eard of that afore. What's yer dooty?

Joe—Duty! I counts the coppers as they come in.—London Answers.

Pretty Icy.

"So she treated you coldly?"

"Coldly! Say, I'd have had to have a sextant and an artificial horizon to be able to find out what latitude I was in if I had been there for that purpose."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Sad Thought.

He—Why are you so sad, darling? She—I was just thinking, dearest, that this is the last evening we can be together till tomorrow.—Chicago News.

The first sure symptom of a mind in health is rest of heart and pleasure felt at home.—Young.

She Repudiated the Charge.

At the men's service in a Yorkshire parish the vicar tried to convey the lesson that the truest heroes and heroines are those who do noble deeds in the secret corner of the home, where none can see or applaud.

"Few of you seem to think," he concluded, "that your wives staying at home uncomplainingly to mind the children and prepare the meals are heroines, and yet their touching devotion to duty proves them to be so."

It certainly hadn't struck one old farmer in this way before, and as soon as he got home he promptly told his wife that the vicar had called her a heroine.

"Whatever does that mean?" asked the good lady.

"Oh, it means a woman who stays in t' house instead of goin' art to show hersen," explained the farmer vaguely.

"Then I'm not a heroine, an' I'll thang t' vicar to mind what he's sayin'," snapped the wife. "I go to his church as much as t' other women do, an' he must be blind if he can't see me. Why, I'd five different colors in t' bonnet I wore last Sunday!"—London Spectator.

The First Balloons.

The chemical philosophers have discovered a body (which I have forgotten, but will inquire) which dissolved by an acid emits a vapor lighter than the atmospherical air. This vapor is caught, among other means, by tying a bladder compressed upon the bottle in which the dissolution is performed. The vapor, rising, swells the bladder and fills it. The bladder is then tied and removed and another applied till as much of this light air is collected as is wanted. Then a large spherical case is made, and very large it must be, of the lightest matter that can be found, secured by some method like that of oiling silk against all passage of air. Into this are emptied all the bladders of light air, and if there is light air enough it mounts into the clouds upon the same principle as a bottle filled with water will sink in water, but a bottle filled with ether will float. It rises till it comes to air of equal tenuity with its own if wind or water does not spoil it on the way. Such, madam, is an air balloon.—From Dr. Johnson's Letter, Sept. 22, 1783, to Mrs. Thrale.

Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

The story runs that Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata"—always so called, though he so rarely gave a descriptive name to any of his works—was composed on an occasion when he had been playing to some stranger folk by chance. Walking with a friend, he overheard in a humble house some one playing with much feeling a bit of one of his sonatas. He paused to listen. In a mament the music ceased, and a girl spoke longingly of her wish to hear some really good concert. The voice was so appealing that the composer stepped without hesitation to the door and knocked. Admitted to the wondering host, he said, "I will play for you," and played wonderfully till the lamp burned out. Then with the moonlight filling the room he began to improvise—the mysterious delicate breathings of the beginning of that wonderful sonata, then the tricksy elf-like second part, and the glory of the close.—Christian Science Monitor.

Long Words.

While our language does not contain such long words as are found in some other tongues nor so many words of unusual length, still we have several that are awkwardly long for conversational purposes. We have "philoprogenitiveness," with twenty letters; "interconvertibilities," with twenty-one; "intercommunicabilities," with twenty-two; "disproportionableness," with twenty-three, and "transsubstantiationalists" and "contradistinguishability," each containing twenty-four letters. An effective little word is "synacategorematic," as it manages to compress eight syllables into seventeen letters.

The longest monosyllables contain nine letters, and there are four examples: "splotched," "squelched," "strengths" and "stretched."—New York Tribune.

Printers' Marks.

The interrogation mark or "point" (?) was originally a "q" and an "o," the latter placed under the former. They were simply the first and last letters of the Latin word "questio." So, too, with the sign of exclamation or interjection (!). In its original purity it was a combination of "I" and "o," the latter underneath, as in the question mark. The two stood for "io," the Latin exclamation of joy. The paragraph mark is a Greek "p," the initial of the word paragraph. The early printers employed a dagger to show that a word or sentence was objectionable and should be cut out.

A Silent Man.

Jorkins—There's Perkins—you know Perkins—entered into an agreement with his wife soon after their marriage, twenty years ago, that whenever either lost temper or stormed the other was to keep silence. Bob—And the scheme worked? Jorkins—Admirably. Perkins has kept silence for twenty years.

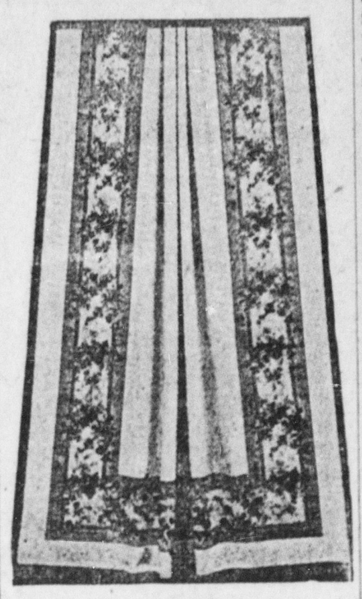
BEDROOM FIXINGS.

Pique's the Material Used This Season.



PIQUE CURTAIN WITH STENCIL BORDER.

There are fascinating fixings for the guest room of the summer cottage this season, and pique is the fabric that is fashioning the smartest and most inexpensive of them. For bureau covers, pincushions, couch pillows, curtains and bedspreads pique is being extensively used.

A not too heavy corded pique is chosen in white, and upon its surface is painted a design in cornflowers, wild roses or chrysanthemums. The illustration shows a charming hanging of white pique with a border of pink roses. But, to come back to the design, the colors used are supposed to be laundry proof and may be applied with a brush after the design is stamped or drawn delicately upon the pique.

Both oil colors mixed with turpentine and stencil dye will wash with ordinary care in a weak lather of white soap and lukewarm water. The added caution necessary in the "doing up" of pique is "don't wring." This material is stretched straight upon the line and allowed to drip dry.

Most of these bedroom fixings are merely hemmed, since the decoration lies in the color work solely.

Making a Paper Hat.

In these days of fancy paper costumes a girl should know how to make an effective hat. Tear crape paper into two inch strips the length of the sheet. Take three strands and plait closely into a smooth and even braid.

Cover a wire frame with these braids and face under part of brim with plain crape paper or mull to match. Make a bunch of paper flowers—roses, poppies or carnations—and arrange them on the hat with a band of dull green, brown or black glazed paper to represent velvet.

To Whiten Kerchiefs.

Handkerchiefs which have become discolored through careless washing may be whitened by dissolving some pipe clay in warm water and leaving them to soak in the solution all night. Next day wash and boil the handkerchiefs in the usual manner, and they will be wonderfully improved in appearance.

For the Home Dressmaker.

Skirts made by the amateur dressmaker have an unpleasant trick of drooping at the back after being worn a little time. This can be remedied by stitching a piece of tape down the back seam before wearing the skirt.

The Useful Tea Wagon.

The tea wagon illustration is a recent importation from England. It is a useful little vehicle that lightens the labor of serving 5 o'clock tea, a function that in the well regulated English household is never omitted. It wheels quite noiselessly on rubber tires, and the top is formed of a glass uft-off tray. Convenient shelves for holding cakes, bread and butter are also provided.

The average American housewife has little use for a tea wagon, for the "5 o'clock" is not an everyday function, as it is in the mother country. But a less expensive wagon built along the same lines as the handsome mahogany vehicle pictured would be very useful to her in clearing away the remains of the daily meals. Imagine how many steps to and from the kitchen might be saved if she had a little wagon to wheel about and pile the dishes upon! A single wagon load for breakfast, for instance, in many households would be all that was required.

Owls' Houses.

Owls' houses are for the most part quite without lining. Whether from design or pure laziness the bones and skulls of small animals which they have killed are left scattered about the floor. Grewsome playthings for the owl children! But one can scarcely imagine even a baby owl being anything but wise and dignified. It is easiest to picture them apparently gravely musing on these skulls like monks in their dark cells.

Since so many of the owls have their homes in hollow trees, we might expect some of their near relatives, the hawks, to be inclined to live in the same way. One of them, the little sparrow hawk, does nest in the flicker's abandoned home and in comfortable knotholes. This bird, too, is satisfied with perfectly bare walls and floor, though the floor consist of small chips left by the decaying wood or by some woodpecker.—St. Nicholas.

Pasteur's Tribute to Lister.

Of all the tributes to the genius of Lord Lister, the discoverer of antiseptic surgery, probably the most touching was that paid to him by Pasteur, the famous French scientist. At a meeting of savants in Paris many years ago Lord Lister was present, and his brilliant achievements were explained to the audience by Pasteur. As he progressed in his speech he became more and more emotional, and at last he was so carried away by his own eloquence that the tears stood in his eyes. Finally he stepped down from the platform, took Lord Lister, who was in the front row of the audience, by both hands, led him back on to the platform and kissed him on both cheeks, after the manner of the French, in full view of the assembly. Few could have looked on unmoved at the great Frenchman's act of homage to the distinguished English surgeon.

Baths In Finland.

One of the greatest trials a visitor in Finland has to endure is a Finnish bath. The method of procedure is unique. Divested of outer clothing and attired in a light and airy cotton garment, you are slung in a sort of hammock composed of cord above a large receptacle like the boilers in public laundries. This is almost filled with cold water, into which at the right moment is flung a large redhot brick or piece of iron, which of course causes an overwhelming rush of steam to ascend and almost choke you. Then when that process has gone on sufficiently long you are shaken out of your hammock, immersed in cold water, and after very drastic treatment you resume your raiment, sadder and wiser than before your novel experience.

Echoes of the Past.

Mark Antony had asked his countrymen to lend him their ears.

"I want them for a loan exposition," he explained. "I have already a splendid collection of Roman noses."

Having gained their attention by this little flight of fancy, he proceeded to fling a few choice bouquets at the late J. Caesar.—Chicago Tribune.

Wonderful Praise Accorded Peruna the Household Remedy

Mrs. Maria Goertz, Orienta, Oklahoma, writes:

"My husband, children and myself have used your medicines, and we always keep them in the house in case of necessity. I was restored to health by this medicine, and Dr. Hartman's invaluable advice and books. People ask about me from different places, and are surprised that I can do all of my housework alone, and that I was cured by the doctor of chronic catarrh. My husband was cured of asthma, my daughter of earache and catarrh of the stomach, and my son of catarrh of the throat. When I was sick I weighed 100 pounds; now I weigh 140.

"I have regained my health again, and I cannot thank you enough for your advice. May God give you a long life and bless your work."

The Time, The Place, The Man.

The uniform primaries law was passed with the single thought of placing in the hands of the people a means of making direct nominations. With this system, it is possible for every voter to go to the polls, call for the primary ballot of his party and vote for the candidate or candidates of his choice. The primaries to be held next month mark the second time that the new system is to be in operation in Centre County. The law was passed to give to the people a full and free voice in the selection of candidates. Now that they have this opportunity, let them make good use of it and attend the primaries on Saturday, June 4.

There is a time for men to center their strength upon some man or some principle enunciated by that man. When men unite upon a common ground and in support of some common cause their force is irresistible. The approaching primaries place squarely before the Republican voters of Centre County two men, each representing a principle and both striving for the same honor. The Republicans of this county must say at the primaries which man and which principle they endorse.

Charles E. Patton is an aspirant for the Republican nomination for Congress. Mr. Patton is a straight Republican. He is a loyal party man. He is honest and clean and believes in and stands for honest and clean politics. He believes that the Republican party is big enough and strong enough to attend to its own affairs, wipe out evils if such exist and punish the unfaithful. He believes in all this and believes that it may be done within party lines. He stands for the principle of party loyalty, and the principle that the greater the hour of trial the greater is the need of men who remain loyal and true. Mr. Patton is firmly of the belief that this is a strongly Republican district and that it should be represented at Washington by a Republican whose Republicanism is not open to question.

Lewis Emery, Jr., is the other man. He represents the other principle. Mr. Emery believes, as he demonstrated by his action of four years ago, that it is immaterial to him which party he trains with so long as it holds out the hope of personal reward. Four years ago the Republican party faced a crisis in Pennsylvania. It needed every man to protect it from the assaults from the enemy. Just as was the case so many times during the Civil war, it was a crisis which tested the loyalty of the strongest. Here and there a few who were weak were easily tempted and who for one cause or another turned their backs upon their party and joined forces with the Democrats because they expected to share some reward. One of those to desert the Republican party was Mr. Emery. His party needed him then. Candidates on local Republican tickets looked to him, hoping that he would stand loyally by the grand old party of his youth. But the temptation was too great. Mr. Emery thought he saw a chance to be elected Governor. He became the Democratic candidate against Edwin S. Stuart. He paraded up and down the State, making war on the Republican party and leaving no stone unturned to bring about its defeat. The principle he repesented was the principle of seeking an honor without regard for the methods pursued.

As between the two men, Mr. Patton and Mr. Emery, and the principle each represents, which do you prefer? The word from all over Centre County is that the Republicans prefer the man who is true rather than the one who is for himself, first, and all others afterward.

Having made up their minds in favor of Mr. Patton, it but rests with the Republicans to register their verdict at the polls.

The time is June 4. The place is at the primaries. The man is Charles E. Patton.

Patton a Worthy Candidate.

The withdrawal of Congressman Barclay as a candidate for renomination for Congress, simplifies matters. It leaves the Republicans of the Twenty-first Congressional District with but one candidate worthy of their support and should insure the nomination of that candidate, Charles E. Patton, of Curwensville. Clearfield County Republicans must stand solidly for Mr Patton. His interests should be their interests for his nomination means his certain election. We believe that Mr. Patton is the unanimous choice of Clearfield County Republicans, but unless they are out at the polls on June 4, 1910 to register their sentiment it will be of little avail to either Mr. Patton or to this County. Curwensville Mountaineer.

Primaries, Saturday, June 4.

RECENT DEATHS.

G. HARVEY MANN.

A sudden death was that of G. Harvey Mann, on Thursday evening, last, at the home of S. H. Pletcher, at Howard. After being out walking with his wife during the afternoon he returned home about 5 o'clock, when he was seized with a stroke of appoplexy. He died at 6 o'clock. Mr. Mann had been in poor health for about two years. He became ill while working in the West Virginia oil fields. As a result of a stroke of paralysis his body was partly affected, as were also his sight, hearing and speech. He responded to treatment in a Pittsburg hospital and returned to the home of his mother, Mrs. Lydia Jones, much improved in health. There, just when it was believed that he was regaining his old-time health, he suffered a second stroke and for a time it was believed he could not survive. He, however, again rallied and slowly regained the use of his limbs, his mind cleared and he was enjoying good health when the final summons called him to eternal rest. His wife, who had been his faithful and devoted companion during his extended illness, was with him when he died. Carrying out an oft-expressed wish of the deceased, a postmortem examination was held to determine the exact cause of death. A clot of blood and several small tumors were found on the brain, constituting a condition which the attending physicians said could not have been relieved, especially with any hope of a permanent cure. Mr. Mann was comparatively young, being but 42 years of age. He was born and raised in the Bald Eagle Valley. When a young man he worked in the woods. Later he located in West Virginia, engaging in the business of drilling oil wells. He was especially sucessful in this and his services were in great demand. Overwork, however, undermined a stong constitution and hastened his death. Mr. Mann was married to Miss Mabel Pletcher, of Howard, who survives, as do also his mother and four brothers as follows: Oscar, William and David, of Pittsburg, and Bert A., of West Virginia.

JAMES MCCALMONT.

Death, on Friday morning, last, ended the long and useful life of James McCalmont, at State College, after an illness of several days. As noted in "The Republican" last week, Mr. McCalmont suffered a stroke of paralysis and remained unconscious for several days until he finally slept into death. Mr. McCalmont, with Captain Samuel H. Bennison and John Holmes, both of Howard, whose deaths were recorded in these columns last week, were neighboring farmers at Jacksonville when they were young men. By some strange coincidence, all three died within a day or two of one another. Mr. McCalmont was born in Marion township, near Jacksonville, and was aged 75 years. He was a son of James A. and Elizabeth McCalmont. He engaged in farming, in which he was unusually successful. Some years ago he retired and located at State College. He suffered a stroke of paralysis about nine years ago and in the latter years of his life he was more or less disabled. A Christian gentleman, he was surrounded by a host of warm friends who endeavored to their utmost to give him every comfort in his last years. By all who knew him the news of his death was received with feelings of the deepest sorrow. Surviving are his widow, who was formerly Miss Emily Lowrie, of Montour county, and the following children: Mrs. John Hartswick and Mrs. J. Calvin Meyer, of Bellefonte; Mrs. I. C. Holmes, of State College; Edwin, of Altoona; Newell, of Rochester; Roy, of Syracuse, N. Y., and Dr. William McCalmont, of Philadelphia. One sister also survives, Miss Jane McCalmont, of this place.

WILLIAM H. IMBODEN.

William H. Imboden died at his home at State College on Monday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, after being ill but a few hours. Heart failure was the cause of his death. Mr. Imboden had not been well for some time but was able to be about as usual on Monday, so that his sudden death came as a shock to his many friends. Deceased was 70 years and was a native of Ferguson township. He was educated at the old Pine Grove Mills Academy and was regarded as a very bright youth. Some years of his life were spent at Philipsburg, where he was engaged as a hotel manager. He was a most genial and pleasing man and made a host of friends wherever he happened to be. In the Fall of 1886 he married Miss Catharine Tanyer, of Pine Grove Mills, and to this union one son, William T., and two daughters, Anetha and Mary, were born. All were present at the bedside when he died. For about ten years Mr. Imboden was employed at the State College farms and on the campus and was regarded as one of the most faithful men at that place. He is the last of the Imboden family to go. Burial was made at the Pine Grove cemetery yesterday, at 1.30 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Riley, of the M. E. church, officiating.

MISS AMANDA BERHERS.

Miss Amanda Berhers died in a Philadelphia hospital on Thursday morning, last, of tuberculosis. She was 38 years old and had been in ill health for some time. In March she went to Philadelphia, hoping to have a long lease of life. The news of her sudden death was received with profound sorrow by her many friends. The remains were brought by rail on Saturday morning and taken to the home of John Grove, at Shilo, from which place the funeral was held on Monday afternoon, at 1 oclock, burial being made at Pine Hall cemetery. Surviving are the following brothers and sisters: Daniel, of Half-Moon; John, Charles and Jacob, of Waddle; Mrs. Richard Palmer, of Linden Hall; Mrs. John Wirts Hammill, Mrs. John Grove, Mrs. Reed and Miss Sally Berhers, at home, and D. J. Davis, of Williamsport. Deceased was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church and a most excellent lady.

MRS. ISABELLA PERKS.

Mrs. Isabella Perks, widow of the late Edward Perks, Sheriff of Clearfield county, 1862-63-64, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George E. Parker, Philipsburg, Friday May 13th, 1910, aged 92 years, 6 months and 29 days. She was the daughter of John Matley, one of the pioneers of the Moshannon. Surviving of the eleven children born of Mr. and Mrs. Perks are the following: Mrs. George E. Parker and Frank Perks, of Philipsburg, and Mrs. George W. Naugle, of Newark, N. J. Also the following sisters and brothers, Mrs. Isaac Swailes, Clearfield; Mrs. Elizabeth Simler, Mrs. James Ardell, Mrs. John Bordreaux and Howard Matley, of Philipsburg, and Allen Matley, of Santa Cruz, California.—Clearfield Republican.

Memorial Day.

Country, and to the Lady who made the first American Flag. God bless them all! The design that will be sent to Bellefonte will represent the First Corps and the Fifth Corps. The Pennsylvania Reserve was in both of these Corps. The white back-ground represents the First Corps, the blue maltese cross represents the Fifth Corps. The Gregg Post, 95, G. A. R. of your town receive it, and has kindly, for fifteen years, taken charge of the same. This was the request of the family that our Association send it to the comrades of the Gregg Post, to whom our Association feels grateful for the interest that they have shown to the memory of our beloved War Governor, Andrew G. Curtin.

No Photographs in Trousers.

In accordance with a new faculty edict, no photographs of Wellesley students who take part in college plays in male costume may be made. The faculty will endeavor as far as possible to have all existing photographs of girls playing masculine characters cut off at the waist. This action follows the recent publication of the photographs of two Wellesley girls in full male dress, taken after the senior play of May 10, and to these pictures the faculty took strong objections.

Patton Leads Emery.

E. Patton, was born. In 1852 General Patton was a delegate to the Whig national convention that nominated General Scott for President, and he was a member of the convention that chose Abraham Lincoln as the standard bearer of the Republican party. General Patton was subsequently elected to Congress, serving several terms.

Such is the type of family from which has been chosen Charles E. Patton, who now asks the Republicans of this district for their support at the primaries on June 4. Those of the present generation residing in this section will at once recall the late Senator Alexander E. Patton. He was one of the finest types of men known in public life in this or any other State. Had he lived it is the universal belief that he would have been chosen to the high office of Governor. He was a man in every sense of the word. His brother, Charles E. Patton, is built along the same lines. Clean, honest, positively above reproach and a Republican through and through, he is eminently qualified to represent the people of this district at Washington. Charles E. Patton is in the prime of life. He knows the invaluable story of hard work. At Washington he will not allow himself to be too busy to attend to the wants and wishes of his constituents. He frankly says that he is not afraid of hard work and that if elected he will be found at his post, ready and willing to serve the old soldier, the business man and, in fact, all the people of the district.

Nominate The Strongest Man.

There are three Republican aspirants for nomination for State Senator in the Thirty-fourth District. This district comprises Centre and Clearfield counties. The three candidates are Philip E. Womelsdorff, of Philipsburg, and Frederic Scofield and Joseph Alexander, of Clearfield. All three are strong, able men. Each is well qualified to fill the office of State Senator. The qualification of all three being at once apparent to the voters, it remains but a question of selecting for the nomination the one man who is strongest in both counties. It will not be enough that he be strong in Centre and not in Clearfield, or that the reverse may be the case. Mr. Scofield and Mr. Alexander are strong in Clearfield. It has been demonstrated that Mr. Womelsdorff is strong, not only in Centre but also in Clearfield. The question for Republicans to decide for themselves before going to the primaries is whether Mr. Womelsdorff is or is not stronger in both counties than either of the other aspirants. If he is, he should be nominated.

Once More, Have You Noticed—

That the "Centre Democrat" is booming Emery for Congress.

That the "Democratic Watchman" is booming Emery for Congress.

That the Centre Hall "Reporter" is booming Emery for Congress.

That the Philadelphia "Record" is booming Emery for Congress.

All four are Democratic organs and all four are booming Emery. For nomination on the Democratic ticket? Not on your life. They are booming him for the Republican nomination.

Why?

Mr. Republican, put this in your pipe and smoke it.

The County at a Glance.

Howard.

Several comet parties were pulled off here last Wednesday evening by the young ladies. The beaux and refreshments were quite successful but the part the comet was to play in the program was absolutely devoid of entertainment. The next time they should wait for the eclipse, which always comes on schedule time.

Joseph W. Alexander, of Madera, Clearfield county, Republican candidate for the nomination for State Senator, was a recent visitor in Howard and met many of the voters. Mr. Alexander is a very pleasing gentleman.

Miss Maude Longee, of Lewistown, is visiting her mother.

Clement Dale, Esq., of Bellefonte, was in Howard on legal business last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Will Conley and Harry Keller, of Bellefonte, attended the funeral of John Holmes on Friday.

A. B. Weirick, of Altoona, was in town Friday on account of the burial of Mr. Holmes.

Fred Leathers has returned from spending some time at the excellent health resort, Cambridge Springs. His many friends are glad to know that the invigorating waters and air have greatly benefitted him.

Miss Nellie Hopkins has so far recovered that the invitations for her wedding, to take place next Wednesday, have been issued.

While returning from the funeral of John Holmes at Jacksonville on Friday the horse driven by Mrs. Charles Yearick and Mrs. Ross, of Lemont, became unmanageable and both ladies were thrown out, Mrs. Yearick being thrown over a fence. She sustained a broken arm and was otherwise painfully injured. Mrs. Ross was also badly bruised.

A number of young folks from this place attended the festival of the Milesburg Athletic Association at that place on Saturday evening, and report it as having been quite a successful affair.

An effort is being made to organize a base ball team here. A meeting was called for last week but not enough persons were in attendance to do much base ball talking, much less to effect an organization. Just as soon as the season warms up a little the boys will come to it and put their usual good team in the field. They haven't caught the spirit yet.

Grove Brothers Post No. 262 have about completed arrangements for the proper observance of Memorial Sunday and Memorial Day. Next Sunday morning they will march to the Christian chapel, accompanied by several of the orders of the town, where the annual memorial sermon will be preached by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Patterson, of Blanchard. The usual services will take place on Monday at the cemetery in town. The Howard band will play for the parade and the several fraternal orders will march with the veterans. The ranks of the Post here have become very much depleted by the death of the members, and while there are scarcely enough remaining to perform the ritualistic services on Memorial day they do their duty with the same sacred devotion as in days past.

The good citizens of Howard exhibit a great deal of pride in being called upon this week to entertain the delegates to the annual Ministerial, Sunday School and K. L. of C. E. convention of the Evangelical church. It was impossible to secure an account of the proceedings for this correspondence, but to sum it up as briefly as possible—the services throughout were quite interesting and helpful to all, and those who attended any of the sessions could not help but receive new inspirations.

Blanchard.

Rapid progress is being made on the improvements to the road between Blanchard and Beech Creek. Supervisor Irvin Wagner has had a dozen teams hauling gravel from Marsh Creek and with this as the foundation the road is being put into good shape.

Last Friday evening there was quite a gala time at the Cyrus Barr home, at Gatesburg. The son, Alfred, returned home from Fort Freemont, South Carolina, where the young soldier served on the Coast heavy artillery for a term of three years. He has a soldiery bearing and looks every inch a soldier, but is quite well content to remain a civillian. His parents and friends gave him a royal welcome home. Refreshments of all kinds were served with a lavish hand, and the evening was spent in wholesome fun and reminiscences of the Southland as the young man saw it.

The Crops.

Crop reports this week to Bradstreet's reflect favorable changes in the weather. The northwest has had good rains, and reports from spring wheat are better. Winter wheat has improved in Kansas, Nebraska, Texas and Oklahoma because of warmer weather and rains, but insect damage is more talked of in Missouri, Illinois and Indiana. Corn planting has made fair progress, and 50 to 80 per cent. of the western crop has been planted. Early-planted corn has not hitherto grown well, and a spell of warm weather is needed for the best development of this crop and of oats. Poor corn seed is complained of in some states. The areas in oats and corn are very large, both crops gaining at the expense of winter wheat. Until toward the close of the week eastern crops were retarded by the cold weather, and frost damage was reported as far south as Virginia. Crop reports from Oregon and Washington are excellent, especially for grain and fruit.

Rains and warmer weather late in the week gave southern crops a turn for the better. Texas reports are very good, especially for grain. A record wheat crop is probable in that state. Cotton has improved in the lower Mississippi valley, but it is claimed the crop will be short. Alabama crop prospects have been improved by rains, which have also been heavy in parts of Georgia. Rain is needed in the coast sections of the South Atlantic states.

Will Continue Bellefonte Daily.

Editor Fred Dunham issued the Bellefonte Daily on Monday, after taking a vacation over Saturday and Sunday, during which time he talked on the people of Bellefonte to learn if they intended to subscribe and also advertise. The fact that he resumed publication is interpreted as evidence that he gathered in some of the necessary long green. It would be a matter of general regret should Editor Dunhan conclude to put the Bellefonte Daily on the shelf.

Student May Loose Eye.

While working in the laboratory at State College, on Saturday, W. B. Stuart, a member of the Freshman class, met with an accident that may cost him the sight of his left eye. He was engaged in mixing some chemicals when an explosion resulted and some of the mixture struck him in the eye. Stuart departed yesterday for Philadelphia, where he will place himself in the hands of a specialist with the hope that his eye may be saved.

Barnum's Circus Tent Burned.

The big main tent of the Barnum & Bailey circus was burned at Schenectady, N. Y., on Saturday, last. Fifteen thousand persons were in the tent at the time and all escaped without injury. It is supposed that the fire was caused by a cigar, carelessly dropped among some canvass by a spectator. None of the circus animals was injured.

How to Serve Water-Melon.

"Watermelons are especially cooling and refreshing on a hot day because of deliciously-flavored juice which they contain," says the Woman's Home Companion. "The edible portion is sometimes thoroughly chilled, cut in small cubes (removing seeds), sprinkled with powdered sugar and arranged in coupe glasses for the first course at lunch or dinner. For family use it is most attractively served in one of the following ways: Cut a section three or four inches in thickness from the center of a chilled watermelon. With a sharp knife cut out a circle of the pink pulp (the edible portion) and place upon a chilled serving-dish of correct size. Serve in pie shaped pieces on chilled plates or cut off a thick slice from both ends of melon (that the halves may stand level) and cut in halves crosswise. Arrange on a serving-dish on a bed of green leaves, if any are at hand."

Elect No County Officers.

The action of Judge John W. Bittinger of York county in directing the commissioners to include in the ballot for this year, candidates for nominations for local officers is held to be contrary to the constitutional amendments by the officials of the department of the secretary of the commonwealth, at Harrisburg, who have charge of election matters.

At the capitol it is the view that no county or local officers can be nominated or elected this year, the purpose of the constitutional amendments relating to elections being to do away with the selection of local officers in even numbered years.

Beetles.

"Amazing things, beetles," the naturalist said. "There's a bombardier beetle, you know, that carries a gun of eighteen charges. Eighteen times, if pursued, this beetle can shoot. Under cover of the noise and smoke he escapes.

"There's a diving beetle that catches fish. He has a natural diving suit that enables him to breathe under water. He will plunge down fifteen or twenty feet after a minnow or young shad.

"The sexton beetle spends its life burying dead animals. It lays twenty eggs in each carcass, and thus the young on hatching have an abundance of juicy and high meat to feed on. Sexton beetles, working together, have been known to bury a rabbit.

"The skunk beetle is so called not without reason. Dare to come too near him in a garden and he will wave his antennae furiously and discharge the vilest odor at you. The common kitchen roach has this skunklike gift also; hence I don't advise you to make a pet of him."—Los Angeles Times.

It Really Happens.

The Woman—Here's a wonderful thing. I've just been reading of a man who reached the age of forty without learning how to read or write. He met a woman, and for her sake he made a scholar of himself in two years. The Man—That's nothing. I know a man who was a profound scholar at forty. Then he met a woman and for her sake made a fool of himself in two days.—Cleveland Leader.

Effect of the Sun on Monuments.

The perpendicularity of a monument is visibly affected by the rays of the sun. On every sunny day a tall monument has a regular swing leading away from the sun. This phenomenon is due to the greater expansion of the side on which the rays of the sun fall. A pendulum placed inside, say, Nelson's column, in Trafalgar square, would be found to describe on every clear day an ellipse of nearly half an inch in diameter.—English Mechanic.

WAYS TO AVOID CATCHING COLD

Simplest of Remedies as Demonstrated on Live Young Model.

A young girl in a dainty sailor suit, who was pretty even with her head thrown back and her mouth wide open, sat on the platform of the auditorium of the Academy of Music in New York, the other afternoon. Over her stood Dr. William Kelly Simpson, who teaches the cure of nose, throat and ear maladies in the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Dr. Simpson held aloft a pint bottle half filled merely with warm water and half a teaspoonful of salt. To the bottle was connected a rubber tube.

Dr. Simpson placed the tube in the smaller nostril of the pretty young girl's nose. One nostril, it is well known, is always a little larger than the other in almost every human being. Then he proceeded to show 400 mothers, wives and sisters who had gathered at the academy to watch the demonstration how easily they could cure themselves and their families of common colds, and most of the other ailments to which the sensitive membranes of the nose, ear and throat are subject.

"Not one person in a thousand knows the proper way even to perform such a commonplace act as blowing one's nose," Dr. Simpson said. "It is very dangerous to pinch one's nose hard and blow both nostrils at once. Particles of infection are liable to be blown up the tube and cause earache. Always blow one nostril at a time. When children have earache parents have also a horrible way of putting household remedies sweet oil, paregoric and the like—in their children's ears. The surface membranes inside the ear aren't able to absorb them and they are likely to collect inside and make the earache much worse.

"As for common, ordinary colds, they are caused mostly by drafts. There are three turbanated bones, one right above another, in the upper recesses of the ear. They are supplied with an unusually large amount of mucous membrane. This membrane can expand and contract. When we get into a draft the membrane protects the lungs by swelling. Thus the nose becomes closed. If you want to avoid colds douche out the nose every morning."

Before Dr. Simpson told how to cure colds the venerable Dr. Abraham Jacobi told the mothers, wives and sisters how colds may be avoided.

"Colds are caused by a sudden surface chilling of the skin," he said. "This makes the blood vessels of the skin contract, the skin blood vessels in other parts of the body become congested. This state of congestion permits the microbes, which, in every person, gradually collect on the outside of the mucous membrane, to get in deeper and begin their mischievous work. When the membrane is normal there are a lot of microscopic cells which keep the germs from entering the circulation. But as soon as the membrane becomes irritated these microscopic cells are swept away and the membrane is unprotected. Don't soften and weaken your own and your children's tissues by too much warmth. Strengthen the tissues by gradually habituating them to cold air and water. Rub them with coarse towels every morning.

"Mothers who expose the calves of their children's legs to cold by making them wear silly nethergarments are not women they are ladies, who should never have had any children at all," continued the venerable physician. Dr. Jacobi said that adenoids were operated on too often nowadays.

LOVE IN PORTUGAL

Ways of Lover Exceedingly Picturesque; Chaperons No Obstruction.

The most important event in the life of a Portuguese woman is marriage. Next in importance are the early days of courtship, for a Portuguese courtship is the essence of romance, and the ways of the Portuguese lover are singularly picturesque. Here is a little drama in which Cupid is stage director. If a young Portuguese sees in the street a pretty girl with whom he would like to become acquainted, he follows her. Chaperons are not impossible obstructions. He follows her right up to her very door and notes the address. Next day he comes again and if the young woman approves of him—for she certainly saw him the day before—she is on the lookout. Some times hard fate in the guise of an angry parent prevents her and then the gallant youth is kept waiting.

Sooner or later she leans over the balcony and smiles at him. The happy youth ties a note to a cord which the fair lady drops from the balcony. The next day the young man comes again. This time he rings at the door. If the inquiries which the young woman's elders have made prove satisfactory, the swain is admitted to make the acquaintance of the young lady. After that, courtship in Portugal is about the same as it is in Kankakee or Kalamazoo.—Leslie's Weekly.

Teaching Young Girls.

When there are two or three daughters in the family, the question of clothing them on the income that has not grown so fast as the children have becomes a problem. The mother suddenly discovers that it takes more cloth, better hats and more expensive shoes to deck the high school than it required for the little lass down in the grades. Moreover, the girl is not as easily satisfied as she used to be; because now the woman is dawning in her, and it is natural to all womankind to take an interest in the clothes of other women.

Perhaps the hardest part of the problem lies in teaching the growing girl that she can not have all the pretty dresses that she wants, "a sailor suit just like Maud's" "a jumper dress like Julia's," "a shirt-waist costume like Kate's". To a child all incomes look alike. She does not realize that her father's $1200 a year must cover just about as many expenses as Ruth Maynard's father's $12,000, so of course, she can not see why she should not have just as good hats, precisely as fine gloves, quite as expensive coats as Ruth who happens to be her most devoted chum. She will see it, when she is older; but, as a little girl, then as an eighth grader, a freshman, a sophomore, she doesn't. She thinks that her father is stingy, and that her mother is indifferent.

The mother who early takes her little daughter into her confidence concerning the family purse, does much toward quickening that girl's realizing sense of value, for in this way only can the girl learn how very limited is the purchasing power of a dollar. Then, this knowledge carefully is instilled. If both mother and daughter face their comparative poverty frankly, if they accept it as an existing fact, and make no pretense of having more than they really have, they will not force themselves into false positions that require "putting on side."

For "putting on side"—that is pretending to be something that one is not—always costs money. One very charming woman actually boasted of having worn the same winter hat for seven years. She was poor, everybody knew it, and yet everybody admired and respected her.

Having trimmed her daughter's mind, so to speak, the mother will find it much less difficult to trim her body. When she can get the girl to see that the white waist that she herself has embroidered is quite as sweet and dainty as Ruth's waist from Paris; that the little hat trimmed with last summer's sash, is just as becoming and rather more suitable than Ruth's milliner-made affair; that the hair washed at home by mother's loving hands is just as clean and fluffy as that shampooed by Mme. So-and-So at a fabulous sum, the mother will have accomplished a glorious deed.

But, in laying bare the secrets of the family income, the mother must not be so depressing that the girl will despair of ever having any clothes. No indeed! The mother should make economy seem a hopeful, clever, beautiful, even a desirable thing. She must make it positively enjoyable. She must make her daughters actually proud of being able to make one dollar do the work of two, to get three years' wear out of a winter coat or a whole new gown out of a 19-cents remnant.

It can be done, this glorifying of economy. Hundreds of entirely respected mothers and much-admired girls are learning the uses and beauties of economy this very minute, and all right-minded persons like and esteemed them for doing it.—Frank H. Sweet in Agricultural Epitomist.

People Tell Each Other About Good Things.

Sixteen years ago few people in the world knew of such a preparation as a Powder for the Feet. To-day after the genuine merit of Allen's Foot-Ease has been told year after year by one gratified person to another, there are millions who would as soon go without a dentifrice as without Allen's Foot-Ease. It is a cleanly, wholesome, healing, antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes, while has given rest and comfort to tired and aching feet in all parts of the world. It cures while you walk. Over 30,000 testimonials of cures of smarting, swollen, perspiring feet. It prevents friction and wear of the stockings and will save in your stocking bill ten times its coat each year. Imitations pay the dealer a large profit, otherwise you would never be offered a substitute when you ask for Allen's Foot-Ease, the original powder for the feet. Imitations are not advertised because they are not permanent. For every genuine article there are many imitations. The imitator has no reputation to sustain—the advertiser has. It stands to reason that the advertised article is the best, otherwise the public would not buy it and the advertising could not be continued. When you ask for an article advertised in this paper, see that you get it. Refuse imitations.

A WAY TO WOO SLEEP.

Watch a Light Spot on the Wall Till Slumber Comes.

Some months ago a friend informed me that he was a great sufferer from sleeplessness. He had experimented with all manner of remedies—baths, drugs, exercise, dieting—but could find no relief, writes H. Addington Bruce in the Delineator.

"How about the 'spot on the wall' cure?" I asked him.

"I haven't heard of that. What is it?"

"It's very simple," I told him, "yet very efficacious, I presume that some light from the street lamp or the moon usually gets into your bedroom? Well, where it strikes the wall you will be pretty sure to find spots that seem to stand out vividly from the dark background. Select one of these patches of brightness, one preferably not much larger than a silver dollar. Settle down comfortably in such a way that it will be within easy range of your vision without straining to see it. Then gaze at it steadily.

"Do not, however, try to stare it out of countenance, so to speak. Instead, let the muscles of your eyes relax until the spot appears to have a confused outline. At the same time, if possible, think of nothing but the one idea—'I am going to sleep.'

"Before long your eyes will begin to feel tired, and they will gradually close. Open them and once more gaze at the spot on the wall. Again they will close. Again open them. Presently you will find it impossible to open them, and the next instant you will be asleep."

Recently I again met him and found him full of enthusiasm.

"That was a splendid scheme," said he. "I sleep like a top nowadays—am asleep almost as soon as I touch the bed."

HE GUESSED RIGHT.

Now See if You Can Tell Which Fair One He Selected.

A certain Turk, according to the story, was once married to a veiled lady in white in the presence of the sultan. As soon as the ceremony was concluded the bride mysteriously disappeared.

The groom was led into an adjoining room, where stood twelve ladies all dressed in white, but without veils. "Choose from the twelve," exclaimed the sovereign, "her that is your bride." As the man had never seen her face the command bewildered him.

"If you make a mistake," added his majesty, "your life shall pay the forfeit."

The poor man walked up and down the row of beauties, but saw nothing whatever to aid his choice.

"You have only a minute left!" yelled the sultan in anger. "Choose at once!"

Ten of the ladies, the man noticed, gave him nothing else than a stony stare. One of the remaining two frowned, the other smiled. "The frowning one," he thought, "is my bride, for she expresses her displeasure and impatience at my ignorance. "No," he said to himself; "it must be the smiling one, for she desires to invite me to her."

After debating the subject in his mind until his time was up he boldly made a selection from the two. He was successful. He had regained his bride. Which was she—the one who frowned or the one who smiled?

Taste and Smell.

Physiologists have long known that many sensations ordinarily ascribed to taste are in reality due to smell, but this fact has been made clearer than before by the investigations of German savants. Air enters the olfactory chamber, where the nerves connected with the sense of smell are centered, both through the nostrils and through an inlet leading from the mouth. In consequence a breath of perfumed air manifests its odor not only when it is breathed in, but when it is breathed out. For this reason we are sometimes deceived as to the source of the pleasure we derive from things taken into the mouth, the agreeableness of the impression being due, in some cases, rather to smell than to taste.—New York Herald.

Pre-Columbian Voyages.

Concerning the subject of the discovery of America John Fiske says: "Nothing can be clearer from a survey of the whole subject than that these pre-Columbian voyages were quite barren of results of historic importance. In point of colonization they produced the two ill fated settlements on the Greenland coast and nothing more; otherwise they made no real addition to the stock of geographical knowledge. They wrought no effect whatever upon the European mind. In no sense was any real contact established between the eastern and western halves of our planet until the great voyage of Columbus in 1492."

Nature's Work.

There is not a moment of any day of our lives when nature is not producing scene after scene, picture after picture, glory after glory, and working still upon such exquisite and constant principles of the most perfect beauty that it is quite certain that it is all done for us and intended for our perpetual pleasure.—Ruskin.

Woman's World

Maxine Elliott's Protege—Newsboy Whom She Will Educate.

MAXINE ELLIOTT AND HER PROTOGE.

"Rusty" McGillan, a New York newsboy, is going to have all he wants to eat, wear good clothes and receive an expensive education, all because he worships Maxine Elliott.

When Miss Elliott was playing at her own theater in Thirty-ninth street, New York city, last season her carriage door was opened every night when she arrived at the theater by a well mannered little fellow, who doffed his ragged cap politely and tendered her all the evening papers, neatly folded. He refused persistently to take payment for the papers, and Miss Elliott would reward his gallantry with a nod and a smile.

The night Miss Elliott opened her theatrical season last fall she was met by the same boy with his armful of papers, who acted as though it was the most natural thing in the world that he should be at his post. Such quiet and dignified courtesy on the part of a ragged little newsboy touched Miss Elliott's heart, and she has made arrangements for his schooling at the Shattuck Military academy at Faribault, Minn. She picked this institution because of its excellence and for the further reason that the boy has an aunt living in St. Paul, near enough to Faribault so that she can look after him.

The favored lad is thirteen years of age and is called "Rusty" by his newsboy comrades because of his dark red locks. He was born in Boston and came to New York city two years ago upon the death of his mother.

Preventing Colds In Spring.

Many a severe cold could be avoided, says Margaret Mixture, at this season if on coming indoors a woman would drink a cup of hot milk.

The object in drinking this is to start the blood circulating after it has become sluggish from the cold. Warm food will draw the blood to the stomach and send it later through its proper channels if digestion is what it should be. Milk is nourishing and at the same time soothing to nerves which have been overstimulated by cold. If a little salt is added the drink may be less unpalatable for those who do not care for milk.

To think that any kind of food may be eaten when one is cold is a mistake, for the digestive organs are not in normal condition at such a time and will not do their work properly. Therefore discretion should be exercised, and if milk is not taken soup is an excellent substitute. The object is to take food that is easy to assimilate and warm.

Few persons realize that when the body is cold vitality is lowered and that only those who are very strong should rely wholly upon reaction for warmth. Any one who is not strong is weakened by such reaction, and it is to reduce this strain that immediate action should be taken to restore warmth.

Colds which make one feel ill are likely to be caught when a person is fatigued, as vitality is then too low to throw off the chill and illness may result. Indigestion is another cause of cold, and it is always well to resort to a good cathartic when the first symptoms of cold are noticed.

Such attacks as the ones mentioned are caused by germs, as a rule, and if the liver is made to perform its functions there is a good chance of the germs being thrown off. The dose should be taken at night, and if possible the patient should stay in bed on the following day. This is a luxury many cannot take, and to these extra precautions, such as eating simple food and protecting the feet from dampness and cold, should be taken.

Visiting Dressmaker.

When the visiting dressmaker comes to you remember that she is not a machine, capable of grinding out work with no wear upon her being. Insist upon the worker taking a rest two or three times a day. Take up to the sewing room a plate of fruit during a short intermission. Ask her to leave the scene of hostilities and walk with you to the end of the garden or street.

Make life worth living for this woman, whose lot is not the easiest. Why, the fact that you hire her to come implies that you cannot stand the pressure and strain of a sewing siege. The visiting dressmaker has feelings and is entitled to a respectable and civil consideration of them. It is an evidence of a lack of good breeding to disregard the rights of a woman who is giving you the full value of her monetary compensation. It is always gratifying to know that you have lightened a burden by a little kind thoughtfulness.

Spontini's Decorations.

Casparo Spontini, the composer, regarded himself in the light of a demigod, and when inspirations crowded upon him he donned a wide, toga-like gown of white silk with a border of gold and a fez of white silk embroidered in gold from which a heavy tassel hung down. With great dignity he sat down before his desk, and if a grain of dust was visible on the paper on which he penned his music he rang the bell impatiently for his servant to remove the obstacle. Spontini owned so many medals and decorations that they could no longer be accommodated on his breast. At a grand musical reunion at Halle an old musician remarked to a comrade, "See how many decorations Spontini has, while Mozart has not one." Spontini, who overheard it, replied quickly, "Mozart, my dear friend, does not need them."

A South African Animal.

There is a curious looking animal in South Africa that looks for all the world like a piece of toast with four legs, a head and a tail. It resembles a pussy cat about the forehead and ears, but its nose is distinctly that of a rat, while its tail is not very dissimilar to that of a fox. This strange animal is called the aard wolf and doubtless dwells in South Africa because, judged by his looks, he would not be admitted into good animal society anywhere else.

Why He Desired a Cannon.

It is related that an Indian chief once approached General Crook and wanted to borrow a cannon.

"Do you expect me to loan you a cannon with which to kill my soldiers?" the old veteran inquired.

"No," the chief replied; "kill soldiers with a club. Want cannon to kill cowboys."

Manhattan Shrimps.

"For those who enjoy using the chafing-dish let me suggest Manhattan Shrimps," says Fannie Merritt Farmer in WOMAN'S COMPANION. "Melt one tablespoonful of butter, add one tablespoonful of flour and stir until well blended; then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, one half cupful of thin cream and one third of a cupful of stewed and strained tomatoes mixed with a few grains of soda. Bring to the boiling-point and add one cupful of finely-cut cheese, one egg slightly beaten, and one and one half cupfuls of canned shrimps broken in pieces. Season to taste with salt, mustard and cayenne, and serve just as soon as the pieces of cheese have entirely melted."

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD BULLETIN

Summer Vacations

The time is coming for summer outings. Have you thought about yours yet?

No country on the face of the globe contains so many delightful summer resorts as the United States, with its near neighbor, Canada.

The Pennsylvania Railroad will issue its popular Summer Excursion Book on June 1, and you will find it a wonderful help in plotting out your summer trip.

It contains descriptions of about eight hundred of the leading resorts of North America, lists of hotels and boarding houses at these various places, a map, routes and rates from the principal stations on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and other valuable information.

If you have grown tired of the resort you have visited for years, you may make a selection from this book for a stay of a day, a week, a month, or the whole summer.

You may plot out an extended tour covering mountain and seashore, or a fishing trip, or a hunting jaunt, by rail or boat or a combination of both.

Any Ticket Agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad will be glad to furnish a copy of this valuable book for ten cents, or it will be mailed you postpaid, on receipt of twenty-five cents, by Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE HUMBLE POTATO

Cheaper Than Ever This Year by Way of Contrast.

The one conspicuous exception to the rule of high prices of necessaries appears to be the potato; for this vegetable ranks among the staple crops and food products along with wheat and corn. It is almost universally eaten, and without it no dinner is complete. It is nutritious and palatable and lends itself to the preparation of dishes in many forms, and withal it is rarely so scare in supply and high in price as to be outside the range of general consumption. According to all accounts, however, the potato growers have fallen on hard times.

The market appears to be overstocked, and prices are only about a third of what they were a year ago. Aroostock repots that potatoes are being sold at 65 cts. a barrel, compared with $1.25 a year ago, and that shipments have been less than half of those of a year ago. It is stated that in New York the buying price is but $1 against $3 last year. Farmers are hauling to the starch factories and selling for hardly the cost of production and it is predicted that the potato acreage in the Penobscot and Aroostock Valleys will be much reduced the coming season.

As to this, it is the usual tendency. If the production of a certain article proves profitable, everybody wants to go into it. The consequence is that presently it is overdone and ceases to be profitable, and then a rush in the opposite direction takes place. That is the way of mankind; to go with the crowd. It was the way with the hog raisers when prices fell and the production of pork became no longer profitable after the panic of 1907, and the farmers hastened to dispose of their breeders. The wise man watches the crowd and goes in the opposite direction. When he sees the prices of pork and potatoes failing and the production of something else, he reasons that the result will be a period of scarcity after a time and that his best policy is to stand pat and stick to his hogs and potatoes, and wait for prices to react. But the proportion of wise men is small.—Portland Press.

Make Coins Good Anywhere.

The most important topic which will be discussed at the international monetary convention in Holland, this year, will be the establishment of an international coinage. Several attempts have been made in the past to provide a tender receivable in all the principal countries at a specific and constant value. Thus far but three countries have arrived at an understanding on this question. In France, Italy and Spain, the franc, lira and pestea pass freely, to each being attached a like value. All endeavors to bring England and the United States into a coinage exchange union have failed. In this country the attempt at issuing international coins was made three times, but got no further than the experimental stage. Coins were designed, values assigned, and sample pieces struck off, but each time Congress refused to sanction the issue. The annoyances experienced by travelers, occasioned by the numerous values which coins obtain in different countries, and the exigencies of commerce are making an international coinage system a prime necessity—From Leslie's

Emergency Puffs.

"For a dessert try Emergency Puffs: Drain canned peaches from their syrup and cut fruit in quarters," says Fannie Merritt Farmer in WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION. "Mix and sift one cupful of bread-flour, one half teaspoonful of salt and two tablespoonfuls of baking-powder (level measurements.) Moisten to a soft dough with milk. Butter individual molds and drop a spoonful of the mixture in each, place a piece of peach in each and cover peach with another spoonful of dough. Steam ten minutes and serve at once. Notice what a large quantity of baking-powder is used in this recipe, two tablespoonfuls, not two teaspoonfuls.

"Remove puffs from molds and serve with Peach-Sauce: To drained syrup add one third of a cupful of sugar and a few grains of salt. Bring to the boiling-point and let simmer until the syrup is thick. In strawberry season sweetened crushed strawberries are delicious to serve with these little puffs; in raspberry season, sweentened crushed raspberries may be substituted with delightful results."

Rolled Celery-Sandwiches.

Here is a new sandwich which is simple, inexpensive and delicious," says the Woman's Home Companion for June. "Take a loaf of fresh bread, cut off the crusts and spread before slicing with a generons layer of creamed butter; dust with salt and pepper and roll tightly around two or three small stalks of celery. The celery should be crisp and tender and cut in small strips of suitable length and dusted with fine salt while damp. This makes an excellent sandwich for school luncheons and is especially dainty for receptions when tied with baby ribbon to match the color-scheme of the table."

A Nice Calculation.

Two very dear old ladies walked up to the window where tickets were to be sold for two popular concerts. They wanted tickets for both nights; but, alas, those for the second evening were all gone! This was the more popular entertainment of the two.

"I'm so sorry, my dear!" pattered one of the old ladies to the other. "We did want to go, didn't we, and we wanted to go both nights?"

"You couldn't give us two tickets for each night?" inquired the other of the clerk.

"No, ma'am."

"You haven't two seats anywhere for the second night?"

"No, ma'am. Couldn't give you nose room."

A great resolution beamed upon her gentle face.

"Then," said she firmly, "give me four tickets for the first night. We will make them do."

"Why, sister," quavered the other, "you're going to invite somebody?"

"No," said she, "but if we can't go both nights"—. She paused, bewildered, quite out of her calculation. Then a happy thought struck her, and she added, "We'll go twice the first night."—Youth's Companion.

A Wandering Lake.

Lake Nor, in the Tabi desert, in southwestern Asia, which has been called the "wandering lake," presents a phenomenon about which contradictory views have been entertained. Perhaps the Swedish explorer Sven Hedin has given the most plausible explanation touching this phenomenon.

It appears, according to that explorer, that the Tarim river, entering the lake from the west, brings down during the period of high water late in summer a great quantity of salt, which has the effect of driving the lake lying on the level floor of the desert toward the southeast. But the summer wind, drifting the surface sand and darkening the heavens with dust, blows generally from the northeast, and it, too, tends to drive the lake before it. The combined effect of the urging by the wind and the river is to force the lake southward. Yet it is thought the migration of the lake is not constant in direction, but it shifts back and forth intermittently, according as the circumstances change.

She Forgot.

At 3 o'clock the absentminded woman left home with an umbrella. At the subway station she concluded it wouldn't rain and left the umbrella with the corner newsdealer. When she came back at 6 o'clock it was raining. Boys with umbrellas to rent darted toward her when she appeared at the head of the subway stairs. She paid one boy 10 cents to escort her home. Then she remembered her own umbrella. Sheltered by a borrowed umbrella, she went back to get it. The newsdealer looked uneasy.

"Just a minute," he said. "Oh, Tom, come here!"

A small boy dodged around the corner of the stand and handed over a dripping umbrella. The absentminded woman looked at the boy; she looked at the umbrella. She recognized both.

"Idiot!" she said. "I paid that boy 10 cents for taking me home with my own umbrella."—New York Press.

The Amen of Nature.

Do you ever wonder why poets talk so much about flowers? Did you ever hear of a poet who did not talk about them? Don't you think a poem which, for the sake of being original, should leave them out would be like those verses where the letter a or e or some other is omitted? No; they will bloom over and over again in poems as in the summer fields, to the end of time, always old and always new. Why should we be more shy of repeating ourselves than the spring be tired of blossoms or the night of stars? Look at nature. She never wearies of saying over her floral paternoster. In the crevices of cyclopean walls, in the dust where men lie, dust also; on the mounds that bury huge cities, the Birs Nemroud and the Babel heap, still that same sweet prayer and benediction. The amen of nature is always a flower.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

The First Fork.

The first fork? The fork, as a matter of fact, did not appear as a table implement until the seventeenth century, though as early as the thirteenth century gold and silver ones were made for special purposes. The ordinary diner was only provided with a trencher, a napkin and a spoon. For knife he used his own, which he carried about, and, worse, there was no second trencher, no second spoon. When the several courses came along he exercised his ingenuity and mopped his trencher with his bread. His spoon—well, we ourselves lick postage stamps!—London Chronicle.

DEEP SEA LIFE.

The Deposits on the Surface of Submarine Mountains.

Whether or not the light of day penetrates the obscure depths of the sea has not been settled by scientists, and the fact that some animals found at a depth exceeding 700 fathoms have no eyes or a very faint indication of them, while others possess very large and protruding eyes, helps to make the dispute all the more sharp.

Another strange thing about the lower depths of the ocean is that when its inhabitants possess any color at all that color is usually orange or red or reddish orange—for example, sea anemones, corals, etc. The surface of submarine mountains is strewn with shells like the virgin seashore, showing that it is the feasting place of vast shoals of carnivorous animals. When a codfish eats it takes an oyster in its mouth, cracks the shell, digests the meat and ejects the shell. Crabs crack the shells of their smaller neighbors and suck out the meat. This accounts for the mounds of shells which are found beneath the waves. All fish bones discovered there invariably crumble at the slightest touch, so completely have they been honeycombed by the boring shellfish, and, further illustrating the constant destruction going on in the ocean's depth, it is said that if a ship sinks at sea with all on board it will be eaten by the fish, with the exception of its metal portions, and not a human bone of its crew will remain longer than a few days.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

MADE WAGNER PAY.

An Early Sonata That Cost the Composer a Lot of Money.

Wagner when a young man wrote a sonata which had a fair success, but in after life he made every effort to suppress it. Going to the publisher, he said, "Have you any copies of that miserable thing still unsold?"

"Yes," was the reply; "I have quite a number of them in stock."

"Send them to me at once, with a bill," said the composer.

A thousand copies were soon afterward delivered at his door. The bill was a big one, but it was paid, somewhat grudgingly, and Wagner thought he had done with the thing. What was his surprise, then, at receiving two or three months later another consignment, this time of 500 copies.

"I thought you had only a thousand of these things," he protested.

"That was all I had in stock," explained the dealer, "but these have been returned by my agents, to whom I wrote that you wished to have the sonata suppressed."

Wagner winced, but there was nothing for it but to pay the bill. And thereafter whenever business was dull with this crafty publisher a few hundred copies of the sonata would be struck off on shopworn paper and delivered at the composer's door with a memorandum to the effect that they had just come back from remote places where they had been sent for sale.

Salesmanship.

A salesman in a furnishing store displayed to a friendly customer a gentleman's plain linen handkerchief at $5. The man had always thought he was doing well to pay 50 cents and questioned the salesman about it.

"How can a man figure it that he gets his money's worth when he pays $5 for a handkerchief? It doesn't serve the purpose any better, and he couldn't afford to tell any one that he was big enough fool to pay that price."

"He gets his money's worth," said the salesman, "from the added force of self respect that comes with his own personal assurance that he has the best that can be produced. That conviction helps him in urging his point and in swinging the big deal his way, and the $5 is a mere item of incidental expense."

Ever afterward that customer gladly paid more not only for handkerchiefs, but for every item of his wardrobe.

That is salesmanship.—Collier's.

Corfu's Queer Laws.

Corfu can boast of the most peculiar land laws in the world. The landlords are nearly all absentees, and their tenants hold the land on a perpetual lease in return for a rent payable in kind and fixed at a certain proportion of the produce. Such a tenant is considered a co-owner of the soil, and he cannot be expelled but for nonpayment of rent, bad culture or the transfer of his lease without the landlord's consent. Neither can his rent be raised without his permission. Attempts have been made to alter the law, but both landlords and tenants are apparently satisfied with a system that dates back to the time of Homer.

Absolute Equality.

The Woman—The tax office is one which I simply love to go to. The Man—Very few people do. Why do you like it? The Woman—Because it is absolutely the only place where no discrimination is made against me because I am a woman. They let me there pay just as much as if I were a man.—Baltimore American.

The European Plan.

Landlord (after fair guest has fainted at sight of her bill)—Jean, I have sent the boy for a glass of water for the lady, and I want you to see that 10 cents is added to her bill. Understand?—Fliegende Blatter.

A Good Break.

The Shopper (in china shop to salesman)—You don't break these sets, I presume. The Salesman—No'm, but our errand boy does sometimes.

GOOD WATER VESSELS.

While it isn't necessary to serve drink to fowls in cut glass, a good water vessel is essential.

A vessel fowls can roost on, wade in, upset or can scratch dirt into or one that has no protection from sun and dust is unfit.

The vessel should also hold one day's supply at least, conform to surface of ground, be easy to clean and be made of material that is impervious to filth and germs.

FIG I.—AN EXCELLENT VESSEL.

Fig. 1 is an excellent style and can be made at a reasonable price.

When inside it should be set on a platform six inches high, with enough margin for fowls to stand.

It is easy to clean. Fowls cannot stand on the steep top and is especially adapted to adult fowls, as chicks will drown in it. The condition of the water is seen, and if desired the vessel may be used to hold feed. With top off it is a good pigeon bathtub.

FIG II.—SAME VESSEL APART.

Fig. 3 shows the bucket style vessel and two chick servers.

No. 1 is simply a bucket on legs with top closed, with the exception of an aperture which lets water out into trough as it is used.

It can be made as high as desired, this one holding two and a half gallons and being ten inches high, diameter nine inches, the aperture being one inch and trough one and a half inches deep and two inches wide.

FIG III.—BUCKET FOUNT AND CHICKEN SERVERS.

It should cost 50 cents in quantities, is easy to fill and carry, and while not so easily cleaned as Fig. 1 the water is kept cleaner, fresher, and fowls cannot dip their wattles and combs into water to be frozen later.

The chick servers, No. 2, are the most popular for small stock and should be glazed crockery or metal. Vessels should be scalded often, and remedies like Douglas mixture should not be given in metal vessels.

DON'TS.

Don't put off until tomorrow what you won't do at all.

Don't feed chicks in the incubator nor use the machine for a brooder. That's John Bughouse's style.

Wedding Gifts That Are Different.

Answering the question, "What shall I give?" at Christmas and on the birthdays is much more simple than answering it when the flood of June wedding-invitations begins pouring in. Of course when the bride-to-be is a dear friend and you know all of her tastes and preferences, it is not hard to select a present, but when she is comparatively—or perhaps entirely—unknown, you must trust largely to luck.

I always say, "When in doubt, give sugar-tongs." A pair of plain heavy silver sugar-tongs, with the bride's monogram on it, is a present that isn't likely to be duplicated, and will be immensely liked and used every day.

A tea-caddy, too, of Sheffield plate preferably, makes an attractive gift which may be bought for as little as five dollars. Indeed, Sheffield plate offers great possibilities in the way of wedding presents. Most brides would appreciate a set of casters in Sheffield, while a pierced sugar-basket with a lining of dark blue glass looks like a real antique, though it is only a modern replica. A Sheffield sauce-boat and tray (they form one piece) would be liked by any girl who is going to keep house.—Caroline Denton in Woman's Home Companion.

Furst accompanied him on the trip from Philadelphia. They reported encountering bad roads on the greater part of the way. Laird's car is one of the prettiest in Bellefonte. Unless we are very much mistaken it soon will learn the road between Bellefonte and Fishing Creek so well that the services of a chauffeur will be unnecessary.

Captain Mary Powell and Lieutenant Pearl Shoemaker, the officers in charge of the local Salvation Army corps, will hold their farewell services on Sunday, May 29, at the hall at Spring and High Streets, to the regret of their many friends. Their short stay here has been crowned with success, having made many recruits for their work and doing much good in other lines. From here they go on a much needed furlough. Their successors here have not been announced.

That Rev E. L. Williams, a former Centre County boy, is meeting with gratifying success in his chosen field of work, is indicated by notices of his part in special religious services held in the Methodist Episcopal church, at Polo, Illinois. On Tuesday evening, May 17, he delivered a lecture, his subject being, "Jaw-Bone or Back Bone." By those who heard his lecture it was pronounced one of the finest delivered in that State in many years. Mr. Williams is a brother of E. J. Williams, clerk to the County Commissioners.

REUNION IN OHIO.

Former Residents of Centre County Will Meet July 4.

Former residents of Centre County, located in Ohio, are planning to hold their third annual reunion on July 4, next. It will be held at the residence of J. D. Dannley, at Medina, Ohio, Stop 77 C. & S. U. Electric Line. Mrs. J. D. Dannley is secretary and anybody desiring further information on the subject should write to her.

There are quite a few former Centre countians engaged in business in Ohio. There are a number of former residents of Pine Grove Mills located at Medina. For the most part they are engaged in farming and are meeting with gratifying success.

J. G. Hess, of Pine Grove Mills, a valued subscriber to "The Republican", returned home last week after spending the winter at Medina, with his daughter, Mrs. Charles Smith. He was a very pleasant caller at this office on Saturday. While chatting about Ohio in general and Medina in particular, Mr. Hess spoke in glowing terms of the country and especially the people. Medina, he said, is a town of about the size of Bellefonte, but there is far more business transacted there than here and also the people, as a whole, are much more active than is usually the case with an old established town. The Centre countians who settled in Ohio, Mr. Hess said, have as a rule met with success, seem to like the country and apparently feel that they did the right thing in striking out for the West.

Mr. Hess was on his way to Pine Grove Mills, where he expects to spend the greater part of the summer. Judging by his enthusiasm over Ohio, it wouldn't surprise us a bit if he were to return to Medina before the snow flies.

Bellefonte Academy Reception.

The annual reception and dance of the Bellefonte Academy will occur on Friday June 3.

All past and present patrons, all past and present students, and all friends of the Academy, are cordially invited to the reception, which takes place at the main Academy building from 8 to 10 o'clock. The electric and lantern illumination, the music by Christy Smith's Orchestra and the privilege of meeting friends for a chat on Academy hill, make a program that is at once beautiful and delightful. These receptions always are attended with greatest success and those who stay away miss a social treat. The school rooms are transformed into most attractive reception rooms. The dance under the auspices of the Alumni and undergraduates takes place at the Armory from 10-3.

The committee in charge consists of Thomas Beaver, Gilbert Meyers, Percy Eisenbeis, Willard J. Boyd and George Lee.

Charley Smith, of Altoona, was in town this week, returning home yesterday afternoon. Charley is one of our regular readers, and just about the time he was boarding the 4.44 train for home it occurred to him that he had a one dollar bill that he wanted to turn over to us. It was too near train time for him to leave the station, so he entrusted the dollar bill to a friend. The friend was a friend indeed, and we got the dollar bill. Charley will continue to receive "The Republican."

5 FARM SCHOOL SCHOLARSHIPS

An Exceptional Opportunity For Some Bright Centre County Boy.

The Philadelphia Press, Sunday, published the following announcement, which we reproduce in the hope that it may come to the notice of some bright Centre County boys who want a better education but who lack the necessary funds:

"An offer of five free scholarships for boys of a faith other than the Jewish, and equivalent to the sum of $10,000, was made yesterday by Ralph Blum, of this city, on behalf of the National Farm School, near Doylestown, Bucks County.

"The studies cover a period of four years, and include in addition to the special agricultural course, instruction in English, mathematics and chemistry. Application is open to any boy who can qualify for admission, with proof of a completed grammer school course, of good physical and moral health, and a sincere desire for agricultural life.

"Being a director of the institution, Mr. Blum recently attended a board meeting and learned to his great surprise that notwithstanding the charter of the school is non-sectarian, only one of the 65 pupils now attending the courses is of other than the Jewish faith. Expressing his regret at this fact which would make it appear that religious lines were drawn in the awards of scholarships, Mr. Blum, invited his fellow directors to do something to secure applications from boys of different denominations.

"As a result, Mr. Blum yesterday received a communication from the board empowering him to solicit applications for the five scholarships, which will be eligible after the graduates exercises, June 5.

"Simultaneously with the annual exercises, when Secretary of Agricultural, James Wilson, an intimate friend of Mr. Blum, will deliver the principal address, the corner stone of a new dormitory to be built under a State appropriation recently obtained, will be laid. The speakers at this event will include Secretary Wilson, Jacob H. Schiff, of New York, Mr. Blum and several others."

A wedding of interest to the many friends of the young couple was that at Warriors-Mark, on Wednesday of last week, when Miss Alice Gray Hutchison became the bride of William Rumberger. The wedding ceremony was performed on the lawn at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Archibald Hutchison. Mr. and Mrs. Rumberger will reside at Newcastle.

Baseball Vs. Alfalfa.

Harry Valentine, Eugene Rowe and Daniel Garman were on Tuesday evening fined costs amounting to $3, each, on a charge of trespassing on an alfalfa field, leased by William J. Musser, on Lamb Street. A rather lively hearing was held before Squire William H. Musser, who is no relation of William J., and who up to this time, at least, has not branched out to the extent of growing alfalfa. It seems that the three boys mentioned and upward of thirty-five or forty others, have been accustomed to playing baseball in a vacant lot near the Musser alfalfa field. Just as a baseball will do and has been doing for years and years, that used by the boys in question got knocked into the Musser alfalfa field and also into numerous garden plots. Repeated warnings had no effect on the increasing baseball spirit and finally a summons in trespass was issued and young Valentine, Rowe and Garman were directed to appear before Squire Musser. There was nothing criminal in the offense, the boys had no desire to injure anybody's gardens, let alone Mr. Musser's alfalfa field, and Squire Musser did the best he could by fining each of the three to pay $3 costs. Some of the grown-ups present at the hearing weighed the virtues of baseball vs. alfalfa and it was the unanimous opinion that while the two didn't mix very well it was equally true that so long as Young America exists, all the King's horses and all the King's men couldn't keep a youngster's baseball out of his neighbor's garden.
